and go when I want. I will see how it goes. I might drive next year.

I do not have any technical subjects this month. I still have not fixed the small vibration in my brakes because I think I need new rotors and I have not gotten around to buying them.

See you at an event soon.

The Lone Star Region Porsche club had another great concours on May 25th. It was again held at Market Square in the Woodlands. The week before, Sylvia, concours chairwoman, was on TV for a whole two minutes. Market Square was featured on the show and they gave us the two minutes to tell about the upcoming concours. If you missed the interview, then go to our website and view it. Market Square is a great place to hold a concours and this time it was even better because we had an air-conditioned room to do the registration and the awards.

Unfortunately, the cars were still outside and it was hot. Nevertheless, everything went smoothly because of all of the volunteers that Sylvia has to do the work of a concours. It takes two teams of judges (ten people), registration (two people), and then two or three people to do the checking of the score sheets for math correctness. If you have never been to a concours, then you should. Even if you do not want to clean your car to the level that concours participants do, it does not make a difference. You could enter your car in the display class (non judged), come late, eat a casual lunch with your family, look at great cars, talk about Porsches with lots of different people, and collect your door prize for entering (everyone gets a door prize). Think about it for the next concours coming up in the fall.

About this time of the year I write about my cross-country trip to the east coast. This year I will not be making the trip by car. With the high cost of fuel, it was going to cost me at least $200 more to drive rather than fly. The good news is that I do not have to take four days out of my life to put up with the traffic on I10, I65, I85, and I95. The bad news is that I will not have my car with me, and I have to fly when the tickets say I have to, and I cannot come
